

Dr. Jennifer Lincoln

Dr. Jennifer Lincoln is an Injury Epidemiologist with the National Institute for Occupational Safety Health, Alaska Pacific Regional Office in Anchorage Alaska. She has worked in Anchorage since 1992 and leads the “Commercial Fishing Safety Research and Design Project”.

Dr. Lincoln is a Commander in the US Public Health Service and also serves as the Deputy Director for the Alaska Pacific Regional Office.

Dr. Lincoln received her PhD from Johns Hopkins University in Health Policy Management. She is a strong advocate of providing science to improve safety in the work-place and specializes in commercial fishing safety research. She strives to provide scientific information to develop palatable interventions in the form of engineering solutions, new operating procedures or new policies in concert with industry, other safety advocates and regulators. She has authored numerous journal articles and reports related to commercial fishing safety and is regularly consulted regarding marine safety issues.